

Dr. Codie Primeau

Dr. Codie Primeau (he/him) is a Postdoctoral Fellow at Arthritis Research Canada and the University of British Columbia. His educational background includes a combined Master's program in Physical Therapy and PhD from Western University, with research interests spanning arthritis, physiotherapy, orthopedics, health economics, and LGBTQ+ health. In his current postdoctoral work, he is using an online integrated knowledge translation platform, rooted in the principles of Citizen Science, to enhance public engagement in research priority identification. Specifically, individuals from the LGBTQ+ community are invited to share their symptoms and experiences related to pain and long COVID, fostering a collaborative approach to generating research questions that align with the needs and perspectives of the community.
